The Old Westbury Gardens "Children in Bloom Committee" hosted a "Downtown Abbey" themed turn of the century luncheon in the grand red ballroom of the historical mansion to benefit quality programs for children at the gardens. All of the guests were encouraged to wear hats and vintage clothing in the spirit of the afternoon tea celebration that raised funds to benefit ongoing programs at the Old Westbury Gardens. It is acknowledged as "one of the top ten public gardens in the world". The gardens are a cultural and historical icon and a valuable public resource that focuses on nature, wildlife and conservation in the horticulture field for all Long Islander's environmental consciousness.
